World's sports leaders join Ted Williams' Advisory Board

at Sears

How many of these sports leaders can you name? 1. Sir Edmund Hillary, conqueror of Mt. Everest. 2. Bill Holland, holder of nine hydroplane and runabout speed records. 3. Jack Twyman, Captain of Cincinnati Royals. 4. Adolph Kiefer, Olympic swimming champ. 5. Doug Ford, one of golf's top P.G.A. money winners. 6. Bob Mathias, Olympic decathlon champ. 7. Buddy Watson, designer for many tournament archers. 8. Ed Lubanski, highest ten-year bowling average of A.B.C. 9. Murray Crowder, past president Outdoor Writer's Assoc. of America. 10. And, of course, Ted Williams, one of baseball's greatest hitters. Not present for photo: Terry Brennan, former Notre Dame player and coach. Othmar Schneider, Olympic skiing champion.

Sports leaders join Ted Williams' new Sports Advisory Staff at Sears

For the past year, Ted Williams has worked closely with Sears. He has helped field-test and improve the Sears baseball, hunting and fishing equipment that carries his name.

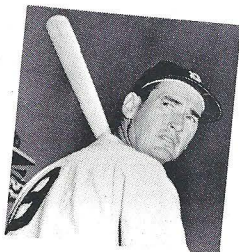

But recently, Ted came to Sears and asked for help. "There are plenty of fields where I'm no expert," he said. "I know men who are. Let's ask some of the country's leading sports experts to lend me a hand."

You see the result of Ted's suggestion above—the Ted Williams Sports Advisory Staff.

Today, before any piece of Sears sports equipment can earn Ted Williams name, it must be personally approved by a member of his Staff. It must be thoroughly proved by the Sears laboratory. And it must be given a final okay by Ted Williams himself.

IMPRESSIVE

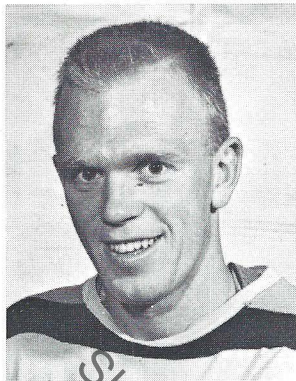

By TOM FITZGERALD

AS candidates for steady employment with the Bruins, young Ron Schock and Wayne Rivers should be gratified to learn they have been awarded certificates of approval by a quite rigid board of examiners.

The steadfast Boston hockey clients who keep turning out for the games in the Garden in such impressive numbers have become experts in the appraisal of young hockey talent, through opportunities for comparative studies in recent seasons.

WAYNE RIVERS

RON SCHOCK

The knowledgeable customers tend to have a very realistic—not to say skeptical—attitude in the matter, in view of their disappointment in some novices who failed to live up to advance billing.

But, the folks obviously were pleased by the working demonstrations offered by the 20-year-old Schock and the 22-year-old Rivers in the successive home victories over Detroit and Toronto on the week-end of February 29 and March 1.

The Bruins' well-wishers weren't stampeded by the happy circumstance that Schock scored one of the goals in the 2-1 game against the Red Wings and Rivers made the concluding contribution in the 5-3 affair against the Maple Leafs.

The fans based their affirmative verdict on the sound performances of the two youngsters in general hockey ability, grading them on such fundamentals as skating, stick-handling, back-checking and shooting. Making allowance for the pressures of the debuts, there was also approval of the poise and aggressiveness displayed by Ron and Wayne.

The people who pay the freight through their contributions at the box-office altogether gained the impression that Schock and Rivers can be definitely helpful contributors to that long-awaited bright future.

This is a source of real satisfaction to the executives of the Boston hockey club and most particularly to cigar-chomping Harold "Baldy" Cotton, the head of personnel procurement and development who prefers the simple title of chief scout (which he pronounces "scoot").

Both Schock and Rivers came into the Bruin sphere of influence on Cotton's strong recommendations, although through somewhat different channels.

Schock caught Cotton's roving eye when Ron was playing intermediate hockey in his home town of Terrace Bay, Ont., in the "head of the lakes" country way up on the far shore of Lake Superior.

Baldy was not alone in his discovery. Talent seekers from other clubs had covetous ideas about the young

Brighter Prospects—

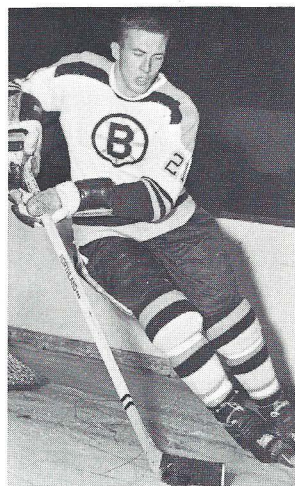

By HERB RALBY

WAIT till next year! — That's a cry the patient Bruins' fans have heard the past four years. They've waited and waited and waited. They heard about the kids in the Bruins' farm system who would be coming up the following year. Yet nothing much has developed.

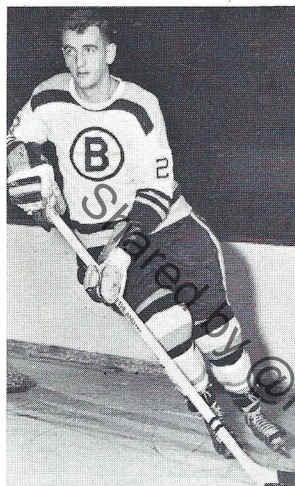

"Wait till next year" this time, however, promises to be a different story.

The Bruins have already unveiled three top prospects for next year in Gary Dornhoefer, Wayne Rivers and Ron Schock.

Dornhoefer has already established himself in the N.H.L. This 20-year-old, with less than a season of pro hockey under his belt, has already proven his ability and has become a big favorite here.

DON AWREY

WAYNE MAXNER

Wayne Rivers, drafted from Detroit last Spring, finally made his Boston debut, and fans liked what they saw. So did the Bruins management, who saw in him a striking resemblance in many ways to a former Bruins' star, Real Chevrefils.

Schock is still playing amateur hockey. He's the lad the Bruins gave a $10,000 bonus a few years back to join the Boston organization. He played two of his three-game tryout here at the Garden and made a distinct impression.

Fans who watched him team up with his former Niagara Falls linemate, Dornhoefer, and veteran Dean Prentice, envisioned one of the Bruins' regular forward lines for next year.

This trio really moved. Prentice found new life in the speedy young legs of his two linemates. Dornhoefer and Schock benefited by Prentice's experience and defensive efficiency.

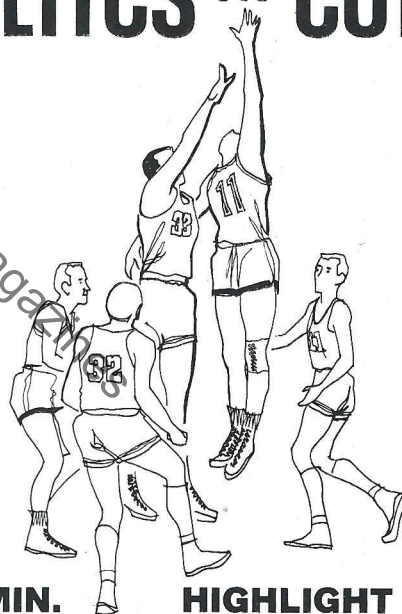

But, these three are only a few of the youngsters who may grace the Boston lineup next year. There's defenseman Don Awrey who started the past season with the Bruins. He's only 21, and benefited by playing regularly at Minneapolis, instead of taking only an occasional turn with the Bruins this year.

There's left winger Wayne Maxner, a teammate of Dornhoefer, Schock and Awrey, at Niagara Falls, Ont., a year ago. He's a speedster and a good scorer. He led the Junior O.H.A. in scoring last year but he's been having a few problems at Minneapolis. But, he's still regarded as a prime prospect.

"The Super-K cover by Seamless is the secret behind this ball," says Bob, "lets you hold it with one hand — lets you feint, fake and pass, as though you had traded in your hand for a size-twelve mitt!"

The Super-K material is more than skin deep: goes through the whole cover, can't wear off. And the tough Nylon winding gives greater strength.

GARY HAS THE KNACK OF BEING IN THE RIGHT PLACE AT RIGHT TIME

By NICK DEL NINNO

GARY DORNHOEFER not only is built like a precise one iron but he also is quite adept at handling that particular golfing implement. Golf, in other words, is another of the athletic achievements of this 6-2, 170-pound rookie. The other, of course, is professional hockey where he has amply displayed his prowess in a short time with the Bruins.

Gary is a one-handicap golfer in his native Kitchener, Ont. And for those who aren't familiar with golf's classifications, a one-handicapper is next to being a professional — which young Gary hopes to become this summer.

While Dornhoefer's golf career is developing slowly and surely, the hockey phase of his sports life is unfolding rapidly. Certainly, the 20-year-old youngster was unwrapped by the Bruins much faster than a stripper unveils in a honky-tonk.

Although Gary came here unheralded to replace the injured Tommy Williams, it wasn't long before he endeared himself to Boston's avid and critical fans. In fact, it took Dornhoefer no longer than his first National Hockey League contest to show he belonged. He went into action on a line with center Murray Oliver and left wing Johnny Bucyk and right off the bat drew cheers by firing the puck at enemy goaltenders.

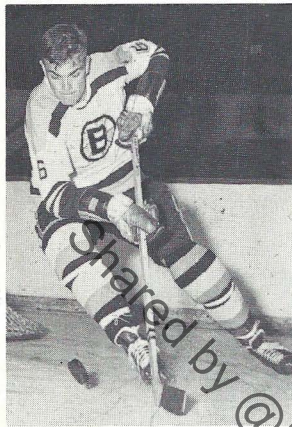

"One thing my teammates told me before I left Minneapolis was not to be afraid to shoot when I got into the National Hockey League," Gary explains. He followed the advice even though he was as nervous as a bank-teller being robbed, when he took the ice in his first game with the Bruins. But once the game got underway he was okay.

He has been okay ever since, too, as evidenced by the fact he scored nine goals in his first 17 games before receiving a hairline fracture of the cheekbone.

One veteran observer pointed out that Gary wasn't a whiz as a skater nor did he resemble Bill Cowley as a stickhandler. "But," chimed in Coach Milt Schmidt, "Gary has the wonderful knack of being in the right place at the right time. This is something you don't teach hockey players. He comes up with that important second effort in front of the net."

If Dornhoefer came into the National Hockey League without fanfare, he also made the grade without benefit of a hockey background in his family. Neither his father nor any of his relatives were hockey players and Gary made it on his own.

Dornhoefer's golfing career is following pretty much the same pattern. He started as a caddie at the age of nine, going to the course on his own.

CAME TO PLAY ~~~~~

ANDY HEBENTON is hockey's unchallenged prototype of the athlete "who really came to play."

The rock-solid right winger who joined the Bruins this season, after a long tenure in New York, surely has all the qualifications to merit that sporting term of approbation.

Muzz Patrick who was Andy's coach and general manager with the Rangers expressed his admiration for the diligent veteran forward in this fashion:

"I've never known a hockey player who gives more effort and complains less than Andy Hebenton."

In addition to his devotion to duty and his quiet manner, his employers have prized Hebenton for another quality. The bosses always have been quite sure Andy would be ready for a night's work.

Hebenton has earned an almost unbelievable reputation for durability in a game of blazing speed and jolting contact with more than a slight flavor of violence.

There was quite a fuss early this season over Andy's move on the National Hockey League's "iron man" record held by Johnny Wilson, who had piled up a total of 580 consecutive regular season games without a miss, through the '60-'61 season.

A lot of people were more excited about this than Hebenton. The 33-year-old native of Winnipeg just kept on going in his usual manner from game to game.

He was happy when he ticked off game number 581 at Chicago on Dec. 4, and he was duly impressed by the ceremony honoring his achievement, before a game with the Rangers in the Garden, on the following Saturday, Dec. 7.

After that, he kept building the record to a point where it might well be out of reach of any challenger in the years to come.

While he doesn't make a big thing about it, though, Hebenton probably would like people to view his hockey career as something much more than a demonstration of endurance.

"It was nice to make that record," he said recently. "About all I can say is that I was lucky, and that I'm a good healer. There have been some close calls like a few years ago when I had an eye shut tight from a cut. But it opened all right before game time."

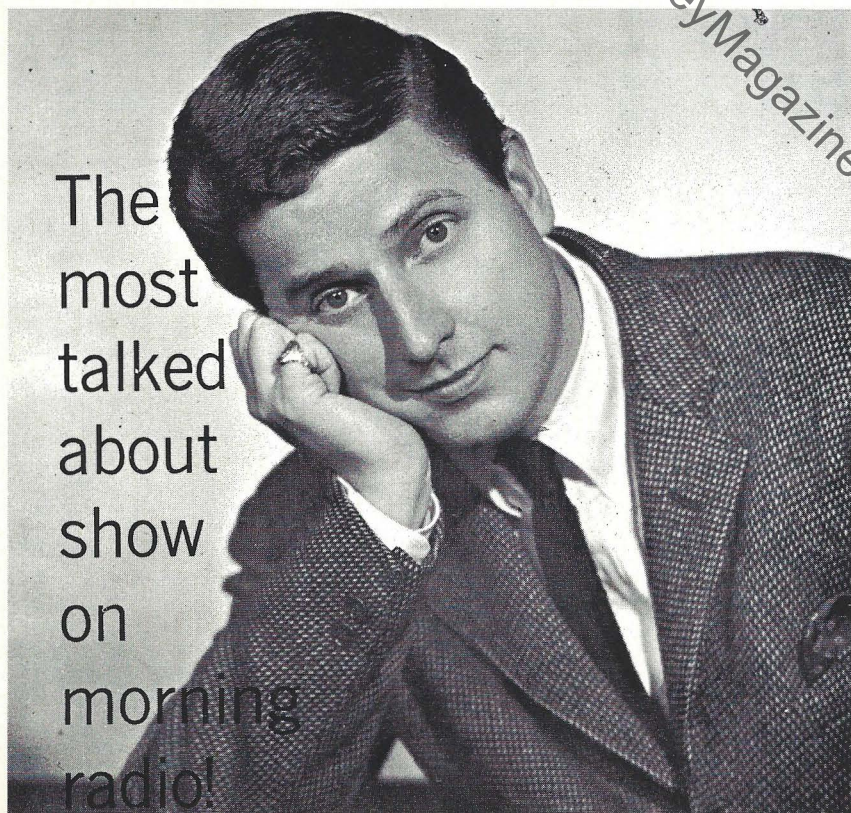

With the "iron man" record behind him, Hebenton has another objective in view, one which he indicates will mean quite as much to him personally.

"I want to hit 200 before I pack it in," he says in his laconic fashion.

It is pretty certain he will fulfill this ambition seeing that he had a total of 177 entering this season and had added 12 more after 54 games.

For Hebenton the big break came in the fantastic 11-0 runaway at Toronto on Jan. 18. He hit for a three-goal "hat trick" in that delirious triumph and kept a hot hand so that he had a total of six goals in five games.

The 200th was that much closer for the "iron man" who is quite as talented as he is durable.

HOT OFF THE ICE

By Herb Ralby

SEEING as how it's "wait till next year" now, let's look ahead . . . Bruins' officials have been touting the bumper crop of youngsters nearly ready to step in and boost the team's morale and standing . . . Two youngsters, 20-year-old Gary Dornhoefer and 22-year-old Wayne Rivers, have already proven they belong . . . They will take care of the right wing berth on two lines next year . . . Ron Schock, making the big step right to N.H.L. from junior amateur competition, didn't look out of place in his five game tryout . . . It's a much faster pace in the majors and it's quite a job for a youngster to step up his game that much in such a short period, but Schock proved he has the makings . . . Incidentally he led the Niagara Falls team in scoring with 38 goals and 36 assists although he missed several games because of injuries . . . Schock along with the Falls goalie, Bernie Parent, were named to the second Junior O.H.A. all-star team . . . Parent missed a first team berth by one point . . . Bruins did have one player on the first club — 15-year-old Bobby Orr. . . . This highly-regarded youngster who has five seasons left of junior eligibility, broke the league record for goals by a defenseman and mark this, was a unanimous choice for the first team defense berth . . . Wait till he grows up! . . . Another pretty good scoring defenseman of the future is big, rough Gilles Marotte who was fourth among the Niagara Falls point-getters, with 12 goals and 34 assists . . . He also sat out 162 minutes in penalties . . . On the Minneapolis farm club in the Central League 20-year-old Don Awrey has an excellent chance of being back with the Bruins another year . . . He started this past season here but with seven defensemen, he was shipped out to get regular play . . . Any fellow who scores 47 goals and 43 assists in 65 games is worth a look . . . That means center Jeannot Gilbert will be around for another shot at a job next Fall . . . Gilbert is the Central League's third-highest scorer . . . Don't forget Bobby Leiter and Ed Westfall either . . . They're still young, hockeywise, and the minor league experience they gained the latter part of this sason, might be just the thing they needed to develop their potential . . . At any rate next year should prove mighty interesting . . . It won't be long . . . In the meantime have a pleasant summer and see you all back at the Garden next Fall . . . Thanks for your patronage.

If you are expecting an emergency phone call leave your name and seat location with doorman, at press door — no paging will be done over public address system.

AL MacNEIL

ALLISTER W. MacNeil has found a home in Chicago. For a while the baby-faced Nova Scotian was one of hockey's wandering puck-chasers. An outstanding amateur, he was one half of a rugged defense pair with the Toronto Marlboros junior club. His partner was Bobby Baun. Together they were supposed to move right into the Maple Leaf defense. But, Al never could quite make the grade with the Leafs, bouncing up and down between Toronto and Rochester for four years.

In 1960 he was drafted by Montreal but wound up with Hull-Ottawa in the Eastern Pro League where he was voted the outstanding defenseman. This won him a trial with Canadiens the following year and while he was a regular member of the squad, he didn't quite fit into Les Habs' scheme of things.

His big break came a year ago when Canadiens traded him to Chicago. He has been a regular member of the Black Hawks defense corps since because his rugged style of play fits in nicely with the team's scheme of things.

fellow, but Cotton received carte blanche from the home office which didn't want to be outbid.

"Offer whatever you have to, but get him," was the gist of the communique from Causeway St. So, Baldy forced out the contenders by raising the ante to $10,000 which is the biggest bonus ever paid to a teen-ager by the Bruins and a very high figure on the hockey economic scale.

Schock was then turned over for delivery to Hap Emms, operator of the Junior A incubator at Niagara Falls, Ont. Although he was slight and even frail appearing boy to start with, Ron has filled out to a good 165 pounds now in his third year of tough Junior OHA competition. And he's still growing.

Ron has proved out to the satisfaction of his sponsors as a center with the Flyers as attested by his production of 38 goals and 36 assists in the 42 games he had played before reporting for his three-game Bruin tryout. (He missed 12 games with injuries).

Schock is back now, of course, helping his club in the play-offs, but you can expect to see him again in the Garden.

Rivers came to the Bruins in a draft maneuver last Summer in Montreal. When Detroit left Wayne unprotected to pick up handy man Irwin Spencer, who had been dropped by the Bruins, Cotton called a caucus of his chiefs.

"Let's take this guy on the next round," he counseled the assembled Lynn Patrick, Weston Adams and Milt Schmidt. There was a nodded chorus of assent, and on the basis of what Rivers showed in his early trials with the Bruins, nobody has had any cause to regret the decision.

Brighter Prospects

Two other young fellows whom Bruins fans have seen in the past and who are still considered potential major leaguers to help the Boston cause are Bobby Leiter and Dallas Smith.

Off to a bad start this season, Leiter lost his confidence. His play deteriorated to the point the Boston management felt it would be to his advantage to play a month or so in the minors. Leiter will be back with the Bruins next year and if he has regained his confidence, this hard-working, rugged checking 23-year-old should be a factor in the Bruins' rebuilding program.

When Smith was with the Bruins previously, he was a defenseman. Bruins' manager Lynn Patrick is convinced when he returns, Dallas will come back as a left winger.

"He could be a good one too," claimed Patrick. "He can skate, check and score. He'll hit a few of those right wingers playing against him too."

Of course, the Bruins prospects on the amateur farm teams for the next few years are even brighter.

At Oshawa, Ont. there is 15-year-old Bobby Orr who is destined to break the junior O.H.A. scoring record for defenseman by Canadiens' Jacques Laperriere, and at his tender age.

Patrick rates Orr as the best young hockey player he's ever seen.

Also at Oshawa are Ron Buchanan and George Vail. Buchanan has already scored more than 40 goals and he still has another year of junior eligibility. Vail is also a good scorer who may need a year or two in the minors before he's ready for the N.H.L.
